

RUDNER LAW

Following my passion for reading and writing, I pursued a double major in English and Classical Studies at the University of Western Ontario. After graduation, I was feeling directionless and unsure of what I wanted to do. Quite fortuitously, I was offered an administrative role as a legal assistant for an in-house corporate law department. One of the lawyers I was supporting took an interest in me, and despite his busy schedule, he always took extra time to speak with me about his work and encouraged me to ask questions. Through this experience, I was able to see first-hand how engaging and rewarding a career in law could be. I realized quickly that this was a career path that would allow me to continuously challenge and improve myself, while still utilizing the drafting and critical thinking skills I had developed through my undergraduate degree, all while helping others. I am incredibly grateful for the experience I had working with this lawyer. In addition to opening my eyes to the potential of a career in law, his unwavering support and confidence in my abilities allowed me to believe in myself and submit my application for law school. Since then, I have been fortunate to work with many lawyers who have encouraged and inspired me.
